

ASCM Releases Expanded Digital Learning and Exam Capabilities

Largest nonprofit supply chain association bolsters digital offerings to support the supply chain community

CHICAGO – March 31, 2020 – The Association for Supply Chain Management (ASCM), the global leader in supply chain learning, transformation, innovation and leadership, today announced the launch of several new digital offerings to help supply chain professional worldwide.

“Everyone’s lives have been turned upside down, it’s critical that we support digital learning and exam capabilities so that our candidates don’t lose any momentum in their pursuit of certifications and knowledge building,” said ASCM CEO Abe Eshkenazi, CSCP, CPA, CAE. “Now more than ever is the time for supply chain professionals to lead and support the mission critical functions. By completing certifications and expanding their knowledge base, they’ll be able to navigate the current crisis and prepare for future challenges and opportunities.”

Starting today, the following will be available online at www.ascm.org

- Online Learning Systems

APICS learning systems and study tools for CPIM, CSCP and CLTD are now available digitally via our online learning system.

- Online Proctored Exam

In partnership with our exam partner, Pearson VUE, exams for CPIM, CSCP and CLTD in select locations worldwide can be taken from an individual’s home computer

- Principles on Demand, *Basics of Distribution and Logistics

ASCM is offering free access to its Basics of Distribution and Logistics, part of the Principles on Demand online content series, now until April 30th.

ASCM’s APICS certifications, which include CPIM (Certification in Procurement and Inventory Management), CSCP (Certified Supply Chain Professional) and CLTD (Certification in Logistics, Distribution and Transportation) are the global standard for supply chain professionals.
